++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Heavy rain in north, sunshine and heavy showers elsewhere.

Today:
Rain will be heavy and prolonged at times across central and northern Scotland with a risk of thunder. Elsewhere, scattered showers along with sunny spells, some of the showers being heavy with thunderstorms in places by afternoon. Breezy.

Tonight:
Rain at times across Scotland easing, but further heavy showers across central UK, particularly affecting northwest England. Southern areas, breezy and becoming mostly dry with clear spells.

Thursday:
Drier across southern areas than recent days with sunny spells. Cloud and rain over Scotland moving south into Northern Ireland and northern England, but turning more showery.

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Showers for many Friday, prolonged across southern areas during the morning. Showers become confined to southern areas over the weekend, with a lot of dry weather elsewhere. Generally rather cool.
